GEORGIAN 1970

Georgetown High School

Georgetown, Mass.

Abuse. Being a school is a hassle. It rains and snows on you. The wind blows through you. You swelter in the summer and freeze in the winter. You are overcrowded during the day and lonely at night. People: they walk on you, slam your doors, track mud on your stairs, shout in your hallways, and jam your lockers. You're silent, understanding, and constant. And what thanks do you get . . . dull paint on your walls and a new front step. Being a school is really a hassle.

Perseverance. Scores never show what really happens on the field. They don't show the tension of the last two minutes of the game when there's a faint chance for a winning touchdown. They don't show being "psyched up" for a game, being determined to win, and then losing. They don't show what really counts, the spirit which is in every game, in every practice, in every boy.

Hope. It's disappointing to suffer through brutal games, exhausting practices, and still never win. Our varsity players would not accept defeat, they said, "next time we'll do it."

Our j.v.'s season was different. Their hope was changed to certainty in every game. They didn't have to say, "next time;" they said, "this time."

Involvement. You can't expect others to be active unless you first set an example. Mr. DeAngelis does this in school and out. We could always be assured of having our varied opinions respected in his classroom, despite contrasts or conflicts.

He always says "get involved," and he is involved, with people, ideas and politics. He has aided us and taught us to be objective. Thank you, Mr. "D."

Frustration. If you're on a basketball team, you have it rough. You have to practice, sweat, and work up to a pitch for each game. Sometimes you aren't good enough. Sometimes the spirit is missing. Sometimes a win is just out of reach.

Junior Prom

Precedence. A new trend was continued with the Junior Prom. The novel, exciting atmosphere of Castle Hill in '69 and the Country Squire in '70 replaced the traditional, homemade decorations of the gym.

Though the location was changed the feelings were the same. There were still the first gowns, lacquered hair-dos, and stuffy tuxedos.

There was still the anticipation, the fun, and the memories.

Determination. You're standing out in the field wondering if it's worth it. Your run of bad luck seems endless. But you still practice hoping it will all change with the next game. Many times you want to give up, but you don't. Something spurs you on. You feel sure that if you just try a little harder

Faith. Predictions aren't always right. This year we anticipated a winning team. But even with a new, dedicated coach and spirited players, the predictions did not become reality. Easy victories became defeats, sure losses were victories. The records will never show it, but this year's team was equal to the best.

Realization. You never fully realize how much high school has meant to you until it's all over. In the fall, June can't come too soon. Senioritis sets in early and never leaves. Once future plans are made, you begin to lose interest.

When that last week comes with class day, the class trip, and graduation—all of a sudden it's too soon. You say it can't be over already. It was only yesterday, and now tomorrow is the first day of the rest of your life.
